Park Board Guidelines for Park Naming

When a new park is created, the Park Board uses the following guidelines when considering a name for the park. (1) A "constant" feature nearby or within the park - such as a bordering street or a distinctive natural or man made landmark. (2) An historical event or a person who has made a significant contribution to the Park Board and/or the City of Vancouver. (3) A call for suggestions from the community for consideration by the Park Board.
